EXPLANATIONS

(2) While the classification of a school is a matter that lies peculiarly in the sound discretion of the teacher, yet some facts are obvious. A well-managed school should not have a greater number of classes than are noted above. The teacher should classify her pupils and not permit them to recite singly. The pupil who loses time will either have to catch up or go back into a lower class. All pupils above the Fourth Reader should be put in one class, either in the Fifth Reader or in some other book that is appropriate.

There should not be more than two classes in the spelling book and one in the dictionary. The pupil should be taught number work according to some approved method for one or probably two years, and there should not be more than two classes in each arithmetic. For the first two or three years the pupil should be given good language work, embracing nature study, elementary geography, literature, etc. There should not be more than three or four classes in the language books and grammar combined. Three or four classes should suffice in geography, and one each in Virginia and United States history. Civil government may occupy one of the history periods each week.

In the column headed "Page Limit" write number of page at which class began work before "to," and let it be followed by the last page studied. Under the heading "Suggestions for Next Term," pages that should be reviewed might be noted. Blank spaces are left for irregular classes.

It is hoped that this portion of the term report will fix the idea of classification constantly in the minds of teachers, and save much time by definite statements of each pupil's standing. Let each teacher try not to have more than twenty-five recitations a day. Record number work under heading "Arithmetic," and language work under heading "Grammar."

(b) If this work is given orally, write the word oral in the column headed "Text-books Used."

(*) This information is required by special act of Legislature, and is very important.

NAMES OF PUPILS FROM OTHER DISTRICTS	NAME OF DISTRICT	Days on roll	Days Present	REMARKS

I hereby certify that this report is correct, and that I have not embraced in said report the names of any pupils for any days that they were not present, and that the average daily attendance reported is correct.

Given under my hand this 4th day of May, 1918.

E. Stanford Drwin, Teacher.

1012 Pierce Street, Sycamore, Ill.

EXPLANATIONS

Write the names of the boys first, alphabetically, and then the names of the girls also alphabetically, in each case putting the surname first. In the column for age set down opposite the name of each pupil the number of years completed at the last birthday before school opened. Add up the second, third and fourth columns. Average attendance of boys is found by adding together the numbers opposite the names of the boys in the column headed "Days Present," and dividing the sum by the number of days the school was kept open during the term. Find average attendance of girls in the same manner. Add these two averages together for total average attendance. Name text-books used in teaching other branches, as well as those specified in this report, and be sure to give the total number of each one of the text-books actually used in the school. Give the names of the pupils from other districts, and tell from what districts they come. The names of pupils may be enrolled by grades or classes if the Division Superintendent so desires. Under the caption "Graduation Statistics" use for each study a fraction form of notation. Let the numerator of the fraction denote the class in which the pupil was placed for this session, and the denominator the class in which he should recite next year according to the numbers noted above. For example: A pupil in the primer class who should repeat the work would be marked 1-1 in the column headed "Reading;" if the pupil should be promoted to the First Reader Class the notation would be 1-2. A pupil promoted from the second class to the third class in numbers or arithmetic would be marked 2-3 in the arithmetic column. If the pupil has completed the highest class in any subject, as, for example, geography, the notation would be 4-c in the geography column. While this report is intended for ungraded schools, the notation can be adapted to denote grades, thus, 1-2 P. would mean promotion from First to Second Primary Grade, 2-3 G. from second to Third Grammar Grade, and so on.
